United Nations Security Council
New York, NY, USA

Dear Sir/Madam,

Atrocities are once again being committed in our country, the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC). The Congolese people are again the victim of attacks by an armed group backed by Rwanda: the M23. In addition to the Congolese people's considerable efforts to recover from their past trauma, the M23 is now threatening the DRC's progress toward peace, in particular in the east, and may negate the semblance of peace which the people of eastern DRC were beginning to enjoy. The M23 has recently taken control of more towns in Rutshuru territory, overwhelming the Congolese army and United Nations peacekeeping forces. These advances, and a possible attack on Goma, represent a further threat to civilians.

We, Congolese civil society organizations, decry and stand against this situation. We ask you and your Government to take immediate steps to cease all support from Rwanda to the mutiny in eastern Democratic Republic of Congo led by Bosco Ntaganda.

As you know, Ntaganda is wanted for war crimes by the International Criminal Court. He has been joined in his mutiny by other commanders with track records of serious human rights abuses. We know these men. The people of eastern Congo have long been the victims of their crimes, which have often gone unpunished. We urgently desire peace and stability in Congo, but we do not believe it can come when such individuals continue to incite conflict and commit further abuses against civilians.

Research by many of our organizations in addition to that by the United Nations Group of Experts, the UN peacekeeping mission (MONUSCO), the international organization Human Rights Watch, and others show irrefutable evidence of Rwanda's support to M23. The support includes weapons, ammunition, and recruits coming in from Rwanda, in violation of United Nations resolutions. Rwandan officials are implicated, including the minister of defense. We have also received credible reports that Rwandan army soldiers have participated in operations against the Congolese army, alongside M23 fighters, including during the recent offensive in Bunagana, when a United Nations peacekeeper was killed. It is false to talk of a mafia network supporting M23 from Rwanda, if indeed Rwandan officials and Rwandan army soldiers themselves are involved. Many of our organizations have documented the support to M23 from Rwanda, and we have no doubt that it is happening.

Rwandan support to the M23 rebellion is contributing to the destabilization of the DRC, despite all the efforts undertaken by Congolese and the international community to ensure peace in North and South Kivu provinces, and to develop the economy in a sustainable manner. It hampers efforts to fight the Democratic Forces for the Liberation of Rwanda (FDLR) and other rebel groups because the attention of the Congolese army, the FARDC, is focused on this new crisis. Rwanda's support to M23 saps efforts to bring together the two countries, including recent efforts to restart the CEPGL. It brings about a serious humanitarian crisis, reawakens ethno-tribal tensions, and seriously threatens the natural environment (fighting is taking place in the Virunga National Park). The longer this goes on, the more difficult it will be to find solutions. And the humanitarian consequences will multiply. 200,000 people have been recently displaced in North Kivu, or as refugees across international borders. We fear a further deterioration of the situation.

We urge you and your government to publicly call on the government of Rwanda to investigate and put a stop to all its support to the M23 mutiny. To prove the seriousness of calls from your government and from the UN Security Council, we hope you will be ready to withdraw aid or sanction Rwanda if support to M23 in eastern Congo does not immediately cease.

We also urge you to look closer at who the M23 mutineers really are. The leaders of this movement are military commanders with track records of serious human rights abuses and attacks on civilians in eastern Congo that have been documented by many of our organizations as well as the UN's Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights. General Bosco Ntaganda is sought on an arrest warrant by the International Criminal Court for war crimes committed in Ituri. Since he moved to North Kivu, he has continued to be implicated in horrific abuses. Other top leaders Colonel Sultani Makenga, Colonel Innocent Zimurinda, Colonel Baudouin Ngaruye, and Colonel Innocent Kayna (alias "India Queen") have also been implicated in the forced recruitment of children, ethnic massacres, and widespread sexual violence.

These alleged war criminals are demanding the implementation of the March 23, 2009 agreements, and claim to defend the interests of the Congolese Tutsi community. Yet many members of the Congolese Tutsi community have fled Masisi and Rutshuru territories to escape forced recruitment by the mutineers. Leaders of the Congolese Tutsi and Hutu communities, including military officers, politicians, and businessmen, have been under intense pressure from Rwandan officials to join or support the movement. Some have received death threats, and many feel they have no choice but to join. We deplore this pressure and we urge that it be stopped immediately. We no longer want to bear witness to the scourge of escalating ethnic tensions, and we will do whatever we can to end them.

We are also deeply concerned by the large-scale massacres and other atrocities committed in the past few months by the FDLR (a largely Rwandan Hutu rebel group), the Raia Mutomboki, and other militia groups operating in areas the Congolese army has largely abandoned while focusing its efforts on defeating the M23 rebellion.

Over the past two decades, the people of eastern Congo have suffered countless atrocities during occupations and rebellions backed by Rwanda. Hundreds of thousands of Congolese civilians were killed during these rebellions, and countless others displaced from their homes, wounded, raped, or tortured. The AFDL, RCD, and CNDP rebellions were all backed by Rwandan officials, including Rwandan army soldiers who were often deployed to eastern Congo and participated in the atrocities. Indeed, Rwanda has never on its own admitted its implication in these rebellions. It is therefore not surprising that Rwanda is again striving to deny the evidence. Rwanda is trying to gain time, and force, and understands that many key international players still hesitate to hold those responsible to account.

Time and again, the international community has been reluctant to recognize Rwanda's role in Congo's crises, and very few governments have taken action to press Rwanda to stop such support to rebel groups in eastern Congo. Yet it is we who suffer from these ill-judged policies. It is we, the people of eastern Congo, who are killed when the bullets fly, who have to run for our lives, whose wives, mothers, daughters, and sisters are raped, and whose children are forcibly recruited, die of malnourishment before the age of five, or have no future in areas where schools barely function.

In 2010, the United Nations “mapping report” demonstrated the degree of the worst violations of international humanitarian and human rights law committed in Congo between 1993 and 2003. The report raised the possibility that some of the crimes committed by Rwandan army soldiers in Congo could be classified as “crimes of genocide.” The Rwandan government tried to block publication of the report, and received support from some Security Council members, including the United States. It was only after the report was leaked to the press that Security Council members agreed to publish the report officially.

From 2006 to 2008, the Rwandan government and army backed the CNDP rebellion, led by Laurent Nkunda – a group responsible for large-scale massacres, forced recruitment of children, and the displacement of hundreds of thousands of civilians. The international community turned a blind eye to Rwanda’s role in the conflict until late 2008, when a United Nations Group of Experts report exposed in detail the military support and recruits provided by Rwanda to the rebellion.

We should not permit the same mistakes to be made again. Hiding or ignoring the truth about Rwanda’s support to rebellions in eastern Congo has never brought us closer to peace, stability, or a long-awaited end to the cycles of violence and impunity. The longer the international community waits before putting serious pressure on the Rwandan government, the more time the M23 and their supporters will have to recruit our children by force and expand their area of control with the inevitable result that thousands of people will be forced to flee.

We are tired of being used by Rwandan officials for their Machiavellian objectives. For us in eastern Congo, we want to see no more killings, no more rapes, no more forced recruitment, and no more displacement.

We ask you to do everything to stop these warlike ambitions on Rwanda’s part, to stem its support for rebel forces currently present in eastern Congo, to further commit and support MONUSCO in the defense of civilian populations, and to support the DRC government efforts in the fight against M23 and the thinly veiled Rwandan aggression.

Yours sincerely,
